Debriefing (Exp. Negative campaigning)
[asked only in USA]
Important information [TEXT IN BOLD TO BE PROGRAMMED AS BOLD]

The advertisements that you saw were not real, and no campaign used them in real life.

By chance you were shown a campaign of either the Republican Party or the Democratic Party; and by chance you were assigned advertisements (1) that praises the own party, (2) that attacked the opponent in a civil manner, or (3) that attacked the opponent in an uncivil manner.

We use the information gathered from this exercise to investigate how negative campaigns impact citizens' views on democracy.

Q128. E-voting experiment: conditions
[asked only in Estonia]
The next questions are about a country called Mancosia. Please read the following description of that country: [TEXT IN BOLD TO BE PROGRAMMED AS BOLD]

Mancosia is located in Europe with a territory of 83,871 km^2. In the last census of population in August 2007 Mancosia had 16,336,000 inhabitants. In the last years, the government has taken steps to implement e-government procedures, including internet voting and tax payments online.

[RESPONDENS ARE RANDOMLY ASSIGNED TO 1 OUT OF 4 GROUPS]

GROUP 1

Mancosia is located in Europe with a territory of 83,871 km^2. In the last census of population in August 2007 Mancosia had 16,336,000 inhabitants. In the last years, the government has taken steps to implement e-government procedures, including internet voting and tax payments online.

Mancosia's legislation is quite transparent and its public authorities are very service-oriented and interested in supporting Mancosia's citizens. In particular, the government assigns a large budget to information technology. Such a large budget for information technology has positive repercussions on how much the citizens of Mancosia perceive e-government systems to be transparent, usable, secure and verifiable. In fact, in Mancosia online authentication for individuals to use e-government services works very well, and most people trust using an individual's unique personal identification number (PIN) for e-government services including internet voting and tax payment online. In Mancosia there is a lot of trust in a digital public administration and government.

GROUP 2

Mancosia is located in Europe with a territory of 83,871 km^2. In the last census of population in August 2007 Mancosia had 16,336,000 inhabitants. In the last years, the government has taken steps to implement e-government procedures, including internet voting and tax payments online.

Mancosia's legislation is not transparent and its public authorities are not service-oriented and not interested in supporting Mancosia's citizens. In particular, the government assigns a small budget to information technology. Such a small budget for information technology has negative repercussions on how much the citizens of Mancosia perceive e-government systems to be transparent, usable, secure and verifiable. In fact, in Mancosia online authentication for individuals to use e-government services does not work very well, and most people do not trust using an individual's unique personal identification number (PIN) for e-government services including internet voting and tax payment online. In Mancosia there is very little trust in a digital public administration and government.

Mancosia is located in Europe with a territory of 83,871 km^2. In the last census of population in August 2007 Mancosia had 16,336,000 inhabitants. In the last years, the government has taken steps to implement e-government procedures, including internet voting and tax payments online.

Since Mancosia's autonomy in 1949, it has been marked with a high political stability and a democratic government. Referenda are regularly held, in which the citizens of Mancosia can co-decide on the legislation. The government enjoys a good reputation with the population. It can be concluded from opinion polls that 70% of the citizens are satisfied with the current government and more than 80% trust the institutions of the country. Moreover, according to an international corruption index (CPI), Mancosia is one of the European countries with the lowest levels of corruption. All these factors cause the citizens of Mancosia to trust their country's government a lot.

Mancosia is located in Europe with a territory of 83,871 km^2. In the last census of population in August 2007 Mancosia had 16,336,000 inhabitants. In the last years, the government has taken steps to implement e-government procedures, including internet voting and tax payments online.

Since Mancosia's autonomy in 1949, it has been marked with a low political stability and an oligarchic (authority of few) government. Referenda are seldom held, in which the citizens of Mancosia can co-decide on the legislation. The government enjoys a bad reputation with the population. It can be concluded from opinion polls that 70% of the citizens are dissatisfied with the current government and less than 30% trust the institutions of the country. Moreover, according to an international corruption index (CPI), Mancosia is one of the European countries with the highest levels of corruption. All these factors cause the citizens of Mancosia to distrust their country's government a lot.
