Debriefing (Exp. Negative campaigning)
[asked only in USA W1]
Important information [TEXT IN BOLD TO BE PROGRAMMED AS BOLD]

The advertisements that you saw were not real, and no campaign used them in real life.

By chance you were shown a campaign of either the Republican Party or the Democratic Party; and by chance you were assigned advertisements (1) that praises the own party, (2) that attacked the opponent in a civil manner, or (3) that attacked the opponent in an uncivil manner.

We use the information gathered from this exercise to investigate how negative campaigns impact citizens' views on democracy.

Debriefing (Exp. Negative campaigning)
[asked only in Hungary Wave 2]
Important information [TEXT IN BOLD TO BE PROGRAMMED AS BOLD]

The advertisements that you saw were not real, and no campaign used them in real life.

By chance you were shown a campaign of either Fidesz or the United Opposition; and by chance you were assigned advertisements (1) that praises the own party, (2) that attacked the opponent in a civil manner, or (3) that attacked the opponent in an uncivil manner.

W2_Q111. Stimulus (Exp. Voting modality)
[asked only in USA Wave 2]

GROUP 1

Now, think about voting in the next midterm election taking place on November 8 in the US. Regardless of whether you have already voted, intend to vote or not, please read carefully the following statement and answer the questions that follow.

Imagine you are getting ready to vote in person and your polling station has been relocated. It will now take you about 30 minutes by car and about 50 minutes by public transport to get there. To vote, people in your state need to go to the exact polling station they have been assigned to. But since polling places are now scattered and you can't choose where to vote, you will need to travel a much longer distance to cast your ballot in person.

Once you have managed to locate your polling station you find that the opening hours of your polling place are reduced to a 4-hour window. This gives you the possibility to vote only during a limited time frame. This implies for many people the need to re-arrange their working schedule and/or care responsibilities.

Finally, due to a shortage of poll workers, queues at your polling place are probably going to be much longer this year and you may have to stand in line for over an hour before you can cast your vote.

GROUP 2

Now, think about voting in the next midterm election taking place on November 8 in the US. Regardless of whether you have already voted, intend to vote or not, please read carefully the following statement and answer the questions that follow.

Imagine you are getting ready to vote in person. To vote, you would need to find the polling station to which you have been assigned. Since polling places are allocated based on voters' residential addresses, it should be the one that is closest to your home.

Once you are able to locate your polling station, you also need to check the polling place opening hours. Usually, polling stations are open from 7a.m. to 7p.m. but opening times might change between elections.

Finally, once in the polling station, you would be greeted by election officials who are responsible for administering the election. Among other things, these poll workers had to prepare the polling place for voting and sign in voters. There, you would cast your vote.

W3_Q114. Stimulus (Exp. globalisation constraints)
[asked only in USA Wave 3]
Now, please read carefully the following statement about the US economic situation and answer the questions that follow.

GROUP 1
Economic forecasts for the US coming from the Bureau of Economic Analysis (BEA) indicate that GDP growth will reach approximatively 2% for the last semester of 2022, rebounding from a contraction in the first half of the year, which saw the GDP shrink by 0.6% in the second quarter and 1.6% in the first quarter.

GROUP 2
Economic forecasts for the US coming from the Bureau of Economic Analysis (BEA) indicate that GDP growth will reach approximatively 2% for the last semester of 2022, rebounding from a contraction in the first half of the year, which saw the GDP shrink by 0.6% in the second quarter and 1.6% in the first quarter. Leading economic experts have argued that the yearly GDP growth recorded in the US has been due to the measures enacted by the US national government. According to these experts, who or what people vote for in elections influence the country's economic results and the evolution of GDP growth depends on the national policies decided by the US government.

GROUP 3

Economic forecasts for the US coming from the Bureau of Economic Analysis (BEA) indicate that GDP growth will reach approximatively 2% for the last semester of 2022, rebounding from a contraction in the first half of the year, which saw the GDP shrink by 0.6% in the second quarter and 1.6% in the first quarter. Leading economic experts have argued that the yearly GDP growth recorded in the US has depended less on the action of the US national government and more on the evolution of global supply factors, such as production or shipping bottlenecks. According to these experts, who or what people vote for in elections have limited effects on the country's economic results because of the current intertwining of global markets in the US economy.

Debriefing (Exp. globalisation constraints)
[asked only in USA Wave 3]
By chance, you were shown a message about the evolution of the economy and its causes, and by chance you were assigned to a: (1) statement that emphasized how global markets influence the economy, or (2) a statement where the government is able to influence the domestic economy or (3) a neutral statement that simply displays the factual evolution of the economy.

The message you read does not necessarily reflect the exact leeway of the US government over the economy.
