Data Policy Impacts: An Odum Perspective

Jonathan Crabtree
Assistant Director for Information Technology and Archival Research

Dynamic World of Policy

- New developments all the time
- US Agencies promoting data sharing
- Universities scrambling to comply with "unfunded" mandates
- University libraries are shifting personnel
- Investigators are thinking more about data sharing
- Tool developers are increasing efforts

My Domain Archive Perspective

- Thrilled
- Hopeful
- Concerned
- Cautious
- Worried

Domain Archives Working Together

- Written responds led by ICPSR
- Working groups
- Sharing economic models

Odum's Approach

- Multi-level funding model
- Promote open access where possible
- Promote data lifecycle training
- Help those without resources when possible
- Leverage open source technologies
  - Dataverse
  - iRODS

Tiered Funding Model

- Free self deposit of “small” datasets
- Free online training videos
- Fee based data curation tools training
- Participate on grants as data managers
- Fee based data cleaning
- Embed archivists inside research teams
- Propose grants to foster new approaches

Education and Training

- Lifecycle focused
- Building on Odum's strengths
- Partner with libraries
- Offer custom courses
- Utilize online approaches
- New approaches
  - CRADLE MOOC funded by IMLS
  - Hands-on Workshops

Upgrading Infrastructure

- For medium to small projects especially
- Secure research spaces
- Leverage Dataverse
- Utilize virtualized environments
- Build lifecycle based workflows

Integrating Tools

- Dataverse/Modeshape/iRODS
- DMPTool
- HIVE
- Secure Research Workspace
- Databridge

Leverage Partnerships

- RENCI
- SAGE
- UNC School of Information and Library Science
- UNC Libraries
- iPLANT
- NC-DICE
- Harvard
- DataPass

Overall

- Still Excited
- Still Hopeful
- Very Busy

More information?

www.odum.unc.edu

www.thedata.org

www.thedata.org/presentations

www.data-pass.org

datafed.org

www.databridge.web.unc.edu

cradle.web.unc.edu

Questions

Jonathan_Crabtree@unc.edu

www.odum.unc.edu