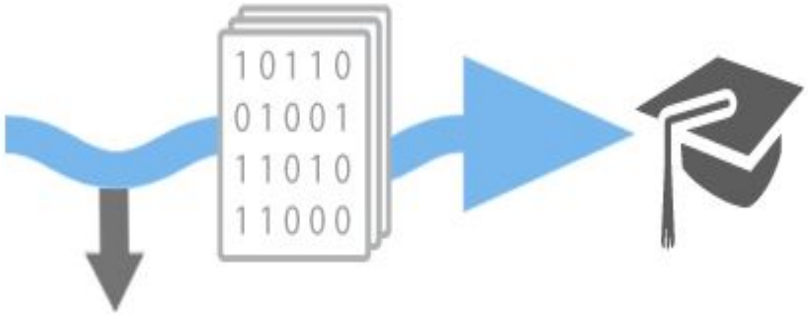
Data management plan

A research proposal is based on the six steps of the research process. In addition, the research proposal[1] also includes information about the sponsor, the planning and a reference list.

Funding agencies increasingly expect to find information about the management of the expected research data in the proposal as well. The research proposal then includes a so-called data paragraph or it has a Data Management Plan (DMP) as an appendix: an agreement about which research data are stored where, when and in which format (organizing, describing, managing, archiving, and accessing data).



Data management plan

Written before the start of a research project.
What data are expected?

Below some examples of funding agencies and their requests for datamanagementplan or a data paragraph:
